Being available and engagable are key success factors for managers. You must also master each method of communication. It's not enough to be great at only one type. Managers need to be able to interact both formally and interpersonally and to communicate in all the various mediums we use (email, chat, phone, video, and in person of course).

Can a manager be an effective coach? Some professional coaches suggest that managers cannot and should not attempt to coach their employees. After all, the manager has too much of a vested interest in the outcome of the coaching and couldn't possibly be neutral enough to hold back on their opinions.
